SECTION C [10 MARKS]

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions at the end in the spaces provided in the answer booklet.

Fortunately for the Bembas in 1830 a man called Chileshe Chepela became Chitimukulu. He took advantage of the situation to centralise the Kingdom by acquiring political power in addition to his ritual powers. He replaced the chiefs with his own relatives who were members of the crocodile clan thereby ending civil wars at the death of Chitimukulu. These relatives simply appointed one of them to become Chitimukulu.

Small armies of the local chiefs joined up to form a permanent national army which Chileshe strengthened by equipping with the latest weapons. These were guns and canons which he obtained from the Arabs through signing an economic alliance in the 1840s.

To be able to acquire guns and canons is one thing and to be able to use them effectively is another. Chileshe was faced with the problem of how to teach his people to use them. Luckily, for him in 1856 he was attacked by the Ngoni at the Battle of Chinsali. This attack gave him chance to teach his people how to use guns and canons in a real situation. It also encouraged the Bembas to unite against an external enemy and showed them the importance of assimilating their conquered people into the Bemba culture. The skill and strength of the two great leaders: Chileshe Chepela (1830 – 1860) and Chitapankwa (1865 – 1883) made the Kingdom to expand through conquests.
